WELLINGTON, New Zealand - Prime Minister David Lange of New Zealand says his Labor government will not change its anti-nuclear policy espite evidence of serious public and military concern over a cut in defense ties with the United States.

He has no second thoughts, he said in an interview recently, about the decision to ban nuclear-armed and nuclear-powered vessels from New Zealand's waters. The United States says the ban conflicts with Wellington's obligations under the 1951 ANZUS treaty, which links the two countries and Australia in a mutual defense pact.

A poll taken in the spring showed that 52 percent of the New Zealand public wanted the country to abide by the terms of the accord. The Defense Ministry also expressed concern about being cut out of the treaty, saying the the armed forces would suffer from not participating in joint exercises with the United States and that timely logistical support was becoming harder to obtain. dized sales of wheat to the Soviet Union and sugar to China, despite strong protests by Australia, showed that the United States put self-interest ahead of lovalty to a treaty partner.

The offer, he said, "reinforced in New Zealanders' minds the stance we had taken."

New Zealanders were no longer "under an illu-sion that we have an inevitable protector and automatic guarantor" in the United States, he

Another senior New Zealand official, who asked not to be identified, said Thursday that recent revelations about U.S. arms deals with Iran had further undermined Washington's reputation as a reliable and credible ally.

Mr. Lange, who argues that ANZUS is a nonnuclear treaty, said his government would be ready to resume conventional defense cooperation with the United States if New Zealand's policy were accented.

In the meantime, he added, New Zealand was seeking closer military ties with its other ANZUS partner, Australia, and with Canada.

Mr. Lange announced recently that the foreign minister of Australia, Bill Hayden, would visit Australia with their counterparts on how the two countries could intensify collaboration in defense of the South Pacific.

In response to Wellington's ban on access by nuclear vessels, the United States last year ended combined military exercises with New Zealand and sharply reduced the flow of intelligence information and other military cooperation. In August, the United States formally suspended its security obligations to New Zealand under the ANZUS treaty.

About 40 percent of the U.S. Navy is nuclearpowered and, for security reasons, the Pentagon, will not disclose which of its ships and submarines carry nuclear weapons

Britain, which is also a nuclear power and military partner of New Zealand's in the Asia-Pacific region, has said it will not make any warship visits to New Zealand or take part in joint exercises in New Zealand waters while the Labor government's policy remains in force.

The Labor Party was embarrassed by the issue

New Zealand next month to review cooperation between the two countries. Last week, Defense Minister Frank O'Flynn and other senior New Zealand officials met in with the United States.

It said a poll taken in April and May showed that 72 percent of the respondents wanted New Zealand to be in an alliance with larger countries, while 73 percent, many of them the same people. wanted nuclear-free military arrangements.

However, when asked to choose between an ANZUS with nuclear ships and no participation in ANZUS, New Zealanders supported by 52 per-cent to 44 percent the ANZUS arrangements in force before Labor won office in July 1984.

Jim Bolger, leader of the main opposition group, the National Party, said Monday that full mem-bership in ANZUS was the only way for New Zealand to guarantee its security.

He said that his party would reverse the policy of preventing U.S. warships from docking in New Zealand. General elections are scheduled to take place in New Zealand by September.

The Defense Ministry's concerns, made in a statement last month to a parliamentary committee, were that the military isolation imposed on New Zealand had hurt the armed forces.

For example, it said, the time required to obtain spare parts and other logistic support from the United States had increased significantly.

"Inability to exercise and train with U.S. forces," the Defense Ministry said, "will lead to a general decline in knowledge of wider military affairs, especially of military operations at the higher levels, and to a loss in professional stan-

The gap could be bridged only partly by increased defense cooperation with Australia, it add-

Mr. Lange made a strong appeal earlier this month for greater regional self-sufficiency in mili-tary matters. He said that Australia and New Zealand shared vital strategic interests and that these would grow in importance as economic ties between the two countries expanded. Australia and New Zealand, he said, "together have the ability to deal with any possible threat to our interests which may emerge from within our region."

That ability, he added, did not depend "on the intervention of any outside power.

BANGUI, Central African Republic (AP) -- Jean-Bedel Bokassa, the former president and emperor of the Central African Republic, was granted a three-week delay in his trial on a long list of alleged crimes committed during his 14-year reign. After a four-hour opening session Wednesday, the trial was postponed for "further investigation" at the request of both prosecution and defense lawyers. It will resume Dec. 15.

President André Kolingba's government has indicated that a death sentence against Mr. Bokassa is likely to be commuted to life imprisonment if he is condemned a second time. He received a first death sentence in absentia in 1980 on 14 charges, including embezzling state funds, mass

A Collapse of Judgment

House on Tuesday was not any single fact but the evidence of a collapse of judgment and values. The dealings with Iran hy White House cowboys turn out to be secondary facets of a more profound crisis. Poor policies and reckless aides can be replaced. Trust cannot, and now the powder trail runs right to the Oval Office.

Could President Reagan not have known that his National Security Council staff was taking money paid by Iran for American arms, putting it into a secret Swiss bank account and sending it on to the Nicaraguan "contras," contrary to law and all ommon sense? Do White House aides feel that free to ignore their commander in chief? Or did Mr. Reagan know about this astonishing pattern of lawless activity and does he now retreat behind the deniability offered by loyal aides? It is hard to know which would be more alarming, presidential ignorance or arrogance.

The facts told Tuesday roar for themselves. For more than a year, the United States has been selling arms to Iran through Israel to gain the release of American hostages in Lebanon. Millions in profits from e arms sales were diverted to the contras by Lieutenant Colonel Oliver North of the National Security staff, Colonel North, well-known as the contras' White House patron, understood full well that, if the arms-for-hostages deal was questionable, the diversion of funds was illegal.

Suddenly, the clouds part on what the State Department has been doing. The president asserted that the secret efforts

The most chilling disclosure at the White . with Iran bsd caused the Ayatollah Khomeini to ease off on terror. Monday, John Whitehead, the deputy secretary of state, dissented frontally. State Departments do not lightly war on the White House.

Some part of government had to preserve credibility: That may explain why Secretary of State George Shultz, a consummate loyalist, three weeks ago started distancing the department from the White House. These were all signals that the secret had to be worse than tran. It is.

The whole affair, from Israeli arms shipments through Swiss hank accounts to subsidizing the contras, smacks of a pattern of lawlessness. Speaking for the administra-tion, Attorney General Edwin Meese tried Tuesday to hold the line at Colonel North. He was the only official familiar with all the details, Mr. Meese said. Vice Admiral John Poindexter and his predecessor, Robert McFarlane, only knew about things gener-ally. Mr. Meese, the man who furnished the legal hlessing for the Iranian arms shipments in the first place, surely must know how bard it is to believe that a staff colonel runs U.S. policy on Iran and Nicaragua.

The president promised an investigation by a special commission. Whether the administration can investigate itself is probably irrelevant. One or both houses of Congress are also likely to conduct their own probes. The sooner the better, for little serious business can be done at home or abroad until the truth is fully explored and the administration reaffirms sound judgment and respect for law.

-THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Reagan Has Chosen Well

President Reagan was quick off the mark to name the members of the commission that is to survey the workings of the National Security Council staff, "in particular" its "operational activities, especially extremely sensitive diplomatic, military and intelligence missions." His choices - the former senator and arms control negotiator, John Tower; the former Democratic senator and secretary of state, Edmund Muskie; and the former national security adviser and retired air force lieutenant general, Brent Scow-croft — have among them the experience in government and the reputation for straight shooting that should ensure a penetrating inquiry and a respectful audience for its findings. In handling his Iran challenge, Mr. Reagan has done well here.

What should the Tower commission look into? Offices reporting to the president, as the NSC staff does, are free of the congressional oversight - including Senate confirmation of the person in charge - that is exercised upon the executive departments. Almost everyooe grants that a president should have this flexible tool of a personal staff. The devices of secrecy available to a personal staff that operates in the national security area, however, create special difficultics. Mr. Reagan himself now declares he was "not fully informed" of at least one activity - the fund diversion - in the arms shipments to Iran. The information reaching the secretary of state was incomplete and episodic. The information reaching Congress was practically nil. The task of the new commission is to recalibrate the balance between the respon-siveness and the responsibility of the NSC staff. It must serve the president, but it must serve him well in the broadest sense, and it cannot be a law unto itself.

Mr. Reagan is not the first chief executive to have trouble assembling, keeping and managing his national security team. He arrived in the White House intent on practicing "cabinet government," with a diminished role for the adviser, then found he needed a stronger figure. But he has been security adviser - or to arrange the right, chemistry among his top aides.

There is no sure model or formula on hand to guide him. A president has to decide what he wants. No outsider can dictate to him. But in the Tower commission. Mr. Reagan has an expert, sympathetic panel. If, by turning to outside advice, he is serious about regrouping for his last two years in office, be has the right men. -THE WASHINGTON POST.

The Unmaking of a President: What Now?

By David S. Broder

WASHINGTON - No sadder tale could be spun in this holiday season than the unraveling of yet another presidency. The sickeningly swift downward spiral of Ronald Reagan's government in the last four weeks has taken the cheer out of the atmosphere and cast a dark shadow on prospects for the New Year.

It is almost impossible to remem-ber that only four weeks ago, Mr. Reagan was asking voters, as a favor to him, to keep the Senate in Republican hands. They said no, and the loss of the Republican majority on Nov. 4 was blow enough to Mr. Reagan's hopes. But a larger storm was brew-ing in the story that broke that same day, the first report of secret U.S. arms sales to Iran.

Now that escapade and its secret corollary, the covert financing of the effort to overthrow the Sandinist government in Nicaragua, have blown up in the president's face. He has taken to his favorite medium, television, three times to explain how this happened. Each time the unanswered questions have been more obvious, the improbabilities more glaring, the the improbabilities more glaring, the reaction more skeptical. When things go this wrong this fast, you have to suppose that some-thing truly corrosive is at work. It is. As Representative Dick Cheney of Wyoming, the able former chief of staff to President Gerald Ford, re-marked, The a party fundamental marked: "It's a pretty fundamental flaw that would allow a lieutenant colonel on the White House staff to operate in defiance of the law."

What allowed this kind of renegade behavior to develop in the White House — only 12 years after the hard-earned lesson of Watergate - was a combination of factors for which Mr. Reagan is ultimately responsible if not directly culpable. He is least to blame for the bubris

- the arrogance and pride - which infected the White House after his 49-state re-election victory. Thank the voters for that,

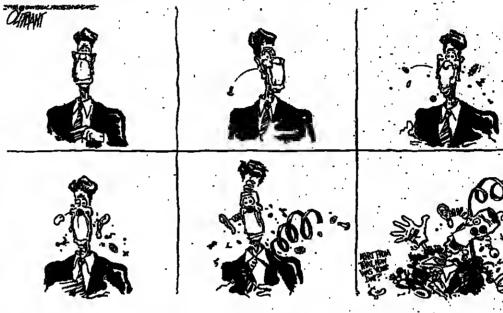

The president got no swelled bead, but the same could not be said about his staff aides, particularly the newcomers who had no personal part in the victorious campaign and no histo-ry of living through earlier political setbacks. They behaved — toward the neurotic quest for secrecy under-Congress, the press and the bureau-mines effective government? How Congress, the press and the bureau-cracy — as if Mr. Reagan's tempo-their egos by writing of "the Reagan revolution," calling the Republican Party the "new majority" and heap-ing scorn on the demoralized Demomouths shut, come before the cameras with the pitiful complaint that those same aides did not tell him crats and the divided Congress. what they were up to. Leave it to history to render judg-ment on a trait of Mr. Reagan's so.

Blame Mr. Reagan much more for the rapid growth of the cult of secrecy that infected the White House atmosphere in the second term. It was Mr. Reagan who avoided news conferhard work of governing, of managing policy, to others. He always has been comfortable as the spokesman, the ences during the re-election campaign and made them as scarce as Redskins tickets thereafter. It was front man, and he always has avoided Mr. Reagan who went on the warpath about "leaks," Mr. Reagan who finding out how programs work. The voters have never cared much about his disdain for the nitty-gritty of government. For most of his tenraged about "unauthorized" disclo-sures of his policies, Mr. Reagan who pushed, against the protests of the George Shultzes and Jim Bakers, for ure as governor of the largest state and as president, they have had no need to mind, for he has chosen comwiretapping of government officials. How often do presidents have to learn the lesson that in this society petent assistants. In this second term,

On Checking the Flight Path After the Crash Landing

WASHINGTON - A parable: Three bunters hire a small plane that lands them in a wilderness area where they stalk caribon. The pilot says, "I'll return in a week, but remember what I said last year: Planes like this can carry only three hunters and one caribou." When he returns he sees the three hunters and three caribou.

The hunters say: "Last year we slipped you $100 and you let us load three caribou." The pilot says: "O.K., but this year it's $200." The hunters grumble but pay, jam the caribou aboard, the plane humbers a few feet aloft - and plows into some trees.

This is not to say that anything that can go wrong should not be attempted. But anything that could go as wrong as the approach to Iran has gone, and anything that so many ex-not conclusive, but strong — that no one seniously concerned with the treme, hostile and unpredictable foreign factions could cause to go

DARIS -In July 1981, this writer remarked that a day would come when President Reagan could "find himself in just as much trouble as Jimmy Carter was in 1979 and 1980. And the country really does not need another presidential term to end in crisis and disgrace."

That this would happen seemed a logical inference from the lack of realism in what the new president and the people around him were saying about the world and how to deal with about the worm and now to deal with it; it followed from their evident ig-norance of how things work, their lack of professionalism, sophistica-tion, and experience in world affairs.

The crisis now is upon us, caused by exactly this combination of ana-teurism and arrogance, at work for years behind the good-natured public personality of the best-liked president since Eisenhower. Mr. Reagan's men and women now are savaging one another. The hell hounds of the press corps have loosed themselves upon Mr. Reagan and his staff. The public and press once again have begun the ritual sacrifice of their leader. This now has occurred four times in succession (leaving aside the brief Ford interregnum). It seems to the have become a national requirement we that each president be destroyed to make way for his successor, each suc-cessor then greeted with undiscrimicessor then greeted with undecrimi-nating enthusiasm and each, when he eventually falters, then to be ceremo-nially strangled in his turn (if only symbolically, so far). Mr. Reagan and his government are mortally wounded. The press, long indulgent of the president's bumbling "misstatements," will now harry and punish him. Congressmen and senators, no longer fearful, will defy and attack him. Members of his administration are already betraying him, and one another, as they scramble to save their own careers.

The nation somehow survives. Brave, and rash, men already are ma-neuvering for the glory and power of the presidency in 1988. The real ques-tion is whether the United States has the political capacity to sustain a scri-ous foreign policy. Domestic policy concerns only Americans. Foreign policy concerns survival. The president of Egypt and the king of Jordan are the latest to say America has lost its "credibility." Margaret Thatcher, Jacques Chirac in France and Helmit Kohl in West Germany, were last week making known their alarm at Mr. Reagan's amiable improvisations at Reykjavik. There is little new in these complaints. To Jimmy Carter's counter-parts in Britain, France and West Germany, his foreign policy ap-peared nearly as haphazard as Mr. Reagan's. What they, and we, are reluctant to acknowledge is that the

The Watergate Comparison

There is no longer any point in resisting comparisons between the current dehacle in Washington and Watergate. This does not imply that Ronald Reagan is Richard Nix-on reincarnate, but it does recognize that without a major salvage operation, the authority of his administration is in the process of being damaged as severely as was Mr. Nixon's in his last two years of office.

Watergate asked a famous question that is about to be posed repeatedly in the United States. "What did he know and when did he know it." Ultimately, in the unfolding Watergate drama, this was directed at the president himself. On this occasion, President Reagan's known disengaged approach to the business of government makes it quite believable that he was unaware of the full dimensions of the Iran-Nicaragua connection until be was told by his attorney general this week.

--- Financial Times (London).

Accustomed to ruling by eloquent charm rather than governing, Ronald Reagan now finds himself practically alone in facing a test that, following the latest revelations, is developing into a political scandal of the first order. Apart from a few Californian friends now out of power - with the notable exception of the attorney general, Edwin Meese -- Mr. Reagan can count only on the secretary of state, George Shultz, to re-establish his personal prestige and that of the United States.

This prospect can hardly be comforting for the president, since Mr. Shultz has taken such care to distance himself from the latest Washington muddle. But for the time being, at least, this presence will be useful in restoring credibility abroad.

What must be re-established first, especially toward the moderate Arab countries, is the coherence of a foreign policy that can no longer afford to condemn terrorism one day and provide weapons the next to one of the main countries in the Middle East suspected of being involved in terrorism.

With respect to the Western allies, especially the Europeans, already alarmed by Mr. Reagan's strange initiatives at Reykjavik, there is an urgent need to revert to the communication and consultation that help make up the strength of the alliance. - Le Monde (Paris).

Ronald Reagan, now publicly shocked and dismayed, has acknowledged that at least one of his boys, Lieutenant Colonel Oliver North, sold arms to Iran to finance the anti-Communist "contras" of Nicaragua. As for Mr. Reagan himself, we have it on the word of Attorney General Edwin Meese that Lieutenant Colonel North's efforts at arms arbitrage took place totally on the president's nap time. In Mr. Meese's account, the president merely tinkled the ivories in the White House parlor while, downstairs, nefarious doings were under way in the basement.

Hardly. Lieutenant Colonel North and the boys were taking their cue from the old man. From its inception, the Reagan ad-ministration has maintained a cavalier attitude toward the rule of law. Consistently, the administration's position has been that when the law interfered with the higher goal --- the fight against communism --- the fight took precedence.

Korea: A Dangerous Rumor

It is not clear yet how the rumor began. There should never have been a mistake of such grave importance considering that Kim II Sung's position in North Korea has been uncontested, his rule has lasted a record 38 years, and the Korean peninsula occupies an important geopolitical position in East Asia. With North and South Korea sharply confronting each other over the demilitarized zone, the Korean peninsula is always a tense place militarily.

It is easily imaginable that the two sides are engaged in desperate activities to gather intelligence about each other. In this respect, they must keep in mind that misinterpretation of the information they gather is likely to trigger an unexpectedly grave situ-ation. It is improbable that the South Koreans deliberately concocted their news releases. If they spread news which might turn out to be false, they would soon lose their international credibility.

MANILA - The jubilant reac-Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile left no doubt about the popularity in some cases corrupt. Thus things came to a head: General Fidel Ra-mos, the chief of staff, had to pre-of President Corazon Aquino or to public weariness over his antics. But the question remains: Where does the nation go from here?

Mrs. Aquino's decisive action in dismissing Mr. Enrile and starting a cabinet shake-up helped counter the of key military officers. And the image of her administration as weak president had to make concessions and indecisive. Her policy of reconciliation had threatened to let loose a Pandora's box of conflicting interest groups. Mr. Enrile's removal, coupled with the announcement Wednesday of a cease-fire between the government and the Communist-de ninated National Democratic Front. should avert such a denouement. But intractable problems remain.

One anomaly of the post-Marcos era is that no crony of the former president has been imprisoned in the Philippines since the February revolution. The delay in locating and prosecuting those who had a part in the crimes of the Marcos regime goes back to the fact that the old political, military and judicial structures remain intact.

A lenient approach has been rein-forced under Mrs. Aquino's policy of reconciliation by such examples as her refusal to prosecute Arturo Tolentino and his supporters for their unsuccessful coup attempt in July, and her insistence on exhausting all peaceful means for dealing with the Communist-led insurgencv. She at first took the same approach in dealing with her troublesome defense minister. Her strategy was to ignore Mr. Enrile's criticisms, to ride out the storm and look to a resounding vindication of her leadership in the February plebiscite on the draft constitution

Another weakness in Mrs. Adminio's administration has been seems consolidated under the conher choice of cabinet ministers: trol of General Ramos and the new Some have given grounds for Mr. defense minister, General Rafael Enrile's accusations that the gov-letter Enrile supporters appear iso-ernment was indecisive in dealing lated and their military careers

Whether Mr. Enrile was

Mrs. Aquino's personal popularity, and the threat of destabilizing consequences from a negative vote, will work strongly in her favor; indeed no political group other than die-hard Marcos loyalists is campaigning for a rejection of the draft. Continued church support for the president was indicated by a pasto-ral letter of the Philippine bishops on Nov. 21, affirming their agree-ment with the principals enunciated in the draft constitution.

The president now has an oppor-tunity and a challenge: to begin again with a new set of ministers, without the threats to her regime that have tended to paralyze and immobilize her in recent months: and to address herself to the fundamental problems of poverty and inequality, which lie at the root of most of the nation's ills.

History offers many examples of moderate reformers who failed because they remained too tied to the structures of the past; their succes-sors usually have less concern for human rights and human values, Mrs. Aquino has not yet demonstrated a willingness to attack those structures, and even the new names suggested for her cabinet were middle-of-the-road or right-of-center individuals. Until the government, the church and the middle classes face up to this challenge, polarization and conflict will be endemic and Philippine democracy will remain a house built on sand.

nation's political institutions, and the method - transformed by television - by which the president is nominated and elected, constitute formidable obstacles to the formation and sussponsible foreign policies. The system, instead, produces ig-norant, ideological and emotional policy-making, the domination of policy by short-term considerations, reactive and opportunistic decisions made with little regard for allied interests or, too often, the long-term interests of the United States itself.

The difficulties of conducting foreign policy under the pressures of mass democracy and an aggressive press, within a constitutional system of separate and competitive governmental powers, and without enforceable political party discipline, have always been recognized, but they have now become critical.

The prudent choice of a country in this situation would probably be to have as little foreign policy as possible - a defensive and noninterventionist stance, with objectives such as Jefferson recommended: "Peace, commerce and honest friendship with all nations — entangling alliances with none." There is, of course, not the slightest chance today of that. But a movement toward renewed national isolationism seems not only inevitable but prudent.

The passivity of the European al-lies and of Japan in recent years, their inveterate leaving everything to the United States, has provided an irresponsible contribution to Washington's own confusion. The West has badly needed more than one nation willing to lead, to think, to defend the values of our political civilization, as well as its military security. It has not had it. At least since de Gaulle it has not had it; and most of the allies objected to him. The alliance until now has been a parade, usually out of step, behind the American flag. It is time to sound the parade's end

WASHINGTON - What started as a mistake and grew into a fiasco lar administration - or of a rogue ele-phant within it - and a desire to punish has now become a scandal. Bad enough that the arms-for-hoctage idea became a series of secret and futile arms shipments to Iran that undermined anti-Romald Reagan's credibility and Romald Reagan's credibility. It now turns out, sensationally, that it was a conduit for illegal funding to the Nicaraguan "contras" too.

guan contras, too. We are about to descend into North-gate, months of endless questions about every detail of the funneling operation run, apparently, by Lientenant Colonel Oliver North at the National Security Council. between persons and policy. > It is difficult to separate the two. That is why when a policy fails, its architects must go too. That is why it was so "must go too. That is why it was so comportant for John Poindexter to resign, albeit two weeks late. Iran policy failed, and the people go with it. On Nicaragua, the opposite may very well happen: The people failed --- disastrously, illegally, perhaps feloniously --- and they may take the policy with them. Judging individuals is important and no doubt will be the focus of the coming -months of hearings. One reporter al-months of hearings. One reporter already asked Attorney General Ed Meese during his White House news conference whether a grand jury - presumahly to inquire into seading Lieutenant Colonel North to jail — had been convened. But just as the national interest was subordinated to individuals in the swap of arms for hostages, national interest may be subordinated to individuals in the hunt for the arms-swap male-- factors: History hardly remembers the names of Donald Segretti and Charles Colson, nor cares about the fate of H.R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman. It does remember, and records in the successive national defeats America suffered after Watergate, the consequences of the fall of an administration. It is quite likely that an immediate casualty of the North affair will be the cutting off of the contras. If such a policy follows from a national debate on the merits of armed resistance to the Sandinists, that is one thing. If it follows from anger at the deception of a particuphant within it -and a desire to punish the president for his men's circumvention of congressional will, that is another thing - and a historic mistake.

It may happen. Less than three hours after Ed Meese's announcement of the secret funding channel to the contras, Senator David Darenberger, Republican of Minnesota, said "it's going to be a cold day in Washington, D.C. before any more money goes into Nicaragua." Should the United States really decide whether to abide a Soviet satellite on the American mainland on the basis of whether Oliver North acted illegally?

Everyone knew that the contras were living off something during the two years that Congress had cut them off. Most presumed that they were getting help from friendly third countries with an anti-Communist interest and many debts owed to the United States. Countries like Israel, Saudi Arabia, Taiwan. That would have been no big deal.

It is a big deal that the money came from profits from the Iran arms-forhostages swap. It shows a deep disre-spect for the law by the Americans involved. It shows an abject and unhealthy willingness to please American repre-sentatives on the part of the Istaelis involved. It shows all involved to have been too clever by half. But it does not in any way alter the fundamental strategic situation in Central America. It does not alter the answer to the question; Ought the United States support a resistance whose aim is to turn Nicaragua from a Soviet satellite into a country friendly to the United States?

A leading anti-Sandinist intellectual who has closely watched American reaction to Nicaragua since the revolution said to me plaintively two years ago that he feared losing his only chance to regain his country because of domestic politics of the United States. To punish Mr. Reagan, Congress will sacrifice Nicaragua, he said.

He may have been right, though pre-mature. My concern, however, is less for him than for us. The loss of Nicaragua would be the most severe geopolitical defeat - aside from the military defeat in Vietnam --- of the United States since the integration of Cuba into the Soviet bloc. Destroy the resistance to punish Mr. Reagan, Senator Durenberger, and you will have forfeited a vital and enduring American interest - a Central America free of Soviet control - for sweet revenge alone. It does not matter if the next six months reveal that the contras' political leaders or even Don Regan knew of any illegality. Get rid of whomever you must. Send lawbreakers to jail. But don't punish the country too.

The American Book Awards, like the PEN Faulkner Award, the National Book Critics Circle Awards and others. are given in a two-step process. The first is the announcement of a short list of finalists, and the second is the declarauon of the winners: in the American Book Awards, there is about a month between the two, the hope being that publicity about the short list will bring recognition to all the nominees and encourage people to read their books. The authors of these books are brought to New York by their publishers for the ceremonies, and are present when the final decision is made public. That is the way it worked this year. with the notable exception of Mr. Taylor's withdrawal from the sbort list and his refusal to be present at the ceremonies. Apart from the merits of his claim that "artists and their work cannot be a matter of competition." the timing and manner of Mr. Taylor's withdrawal did him little credit. Mr. Taylor is a gentleman, one of the few surviving examples of that breed, but it was most ungentlemaaly of him to delay his protest against the ABA until be had been informed that his novel, "A Summons to Memphis." bad not won the prize,

Hurt feelings are understandable: he-yond that, Mr. Taylor's book is, in my judgment, the most accomplished of the three on the short list and the award should, by rights, have been his. WASHINGTON - In the after. 130 submitted for the award, and the five on the nonfiction list from about 170. To make the short list, therefore, it in and of itself a not inconsiderable distinction: as chairman of the nonfigtion jury. I can testify that many book of genuine merit fell by the wayside.

There is an element of competition in this selection, as well as a stronger ele-ment of human fallibility, but no one connected with the awards had it in mind that in choosing "winners," there would also be "losers," Because of Mr. Taylor, I felt it necessary before announcing the nonfliction prize to say that each of the books on our short list was a work of distinction: Ordy one can receive the prize, but all are bonored.

As it turned out, the jurors' choice was "Arctic Dreams," by Barry Lopez: it is hard to imagine that there could have been a happier one - not merely because of the distinction of the book itself, but because of the response of its author. Mr. Lopez had crossed the continent for the ceremonies - he lives in 2 small town in Oregon - with no assurance that he would win the prize. Before the ceremonies, in a pleasant but eltrentely awkward conversation with a couple of juriges, he talked with sincerity about the "community" of writers, and left nn doubt that it was recognition enough merely to be honored as a member of that community, It was a theme he struck again, about an hour later, after coming to the dais to accept his prize. The announcement or his selection clearly had stunned him. and he was on the edge of tears as he began to speak; indeed, he was so flus-tered that he forgot the remarks he had prepared in advance, and spoke extemporaneously. But what he said - about the common interests of writers, and his own "concern with the fate of the country I live in and the dignity and morality of the people | live with" - was so heartfelt that his words were all the more eloquent for being unrehearsed. Listening to Mr. Lopez, it was impose sible not to feel that, whether by diligence or hy luck, we five judges had done well: We had honored a good book by an author who turned out to be, upon inspection, a good man. So far as an award is concerned, need it be said, it is the book that matters, not the author: but to watch Mr. Lopez wrestling with the joy, bumility and wonder that the prize stirred in him was a rare and memorable pleasure.

Henceforth any time someone says that awards are "vulgar and cheap." or that they force writers to "compete." ] shall think of Barry Lopez, who remind ed us that in honoring him and his book. we honor all writers and all hooks. That is what awards are, or should be. for,

U.S. officials and experts on Iran say that the mere fact that both the United States and Israel were eager to cultivate closer ties and provide arms will give others the confidence to open orw investment and advance credits.

"In the last two weeks the willingness to support Iraq, refinance its debt and sell arms oo credit has steadily declined," an analyst said. People who were frightened of an Iranian victory are even more convinced it may happen."

The revelations on arms sales fit into a pattern of Iranian diplomatie moves aimed at reducing Iran's iso-lation and projecting a better image abroad

The war with Iraq and a desperate economic situation have prompted Iranian leaders to send officials on diplomatic missions to improve relations and develop economic and military ties.

In recent days, Iranian officials have expressed delight that a side effect of the arms sales has been to damage American credibility with much of the Arab world.

Iran has been improving relations with the Soviet Union, announcing in August that it would resume natural gas exports to the Soviet Union by the end of the year. The flow of gas was halted by Iran after the 1979 revolution.

"When it behooves the Iranians to act rationally, they do," an American official said. "They started an initiative to bring themselves out of diplomatic isolation and it is working."

ZURICH - Swiss government officials say that the finaocial transactions by which Iranian pay-ments for Western arms were passed through Swiss bank accounts to the Nicaraguan rebels were probably legal under Swiss banking law.

The lofficials said Wednesday that such payments would not have to be registered with the Swiss financial or banking authorities. Therefore, they said, the anthorities have no immediate way of tracking the funds.

The Foreign Ministry spokes-man, Georges Martin, said that the government was aware of the re-ported transactions only through news reports. As far as the government can judge from the sketcby information available, he added, the transactions appeared to be "in-accord with pertinent Swiss banking regulations."

Government officials said that the United States had not cootact-ed them for legal aid in tracking the flow of money. Officers of major Swiss banks said they were not aware of such transactions and that government has been involved in a they had not been asked by overseers in the government or banking, industry to try to trace the money.

"It is not a topic," said Arthur-Gruninger, spokesman for Union Bank of Switzerland, the country's largest bank.

It is believed that $10 million to $30 million paid by Iran to Israel in arms deals was channeled into numbered Swiss bank accounts controlled by the U.S.-backed Nicaraguan rebels, known as "contras.

In the past, the United States has pressed Switzerland to lift bank secrecy in cases involving arms deals, terrorism or insider-trading.

Swiss government officials ap-parently feel that Washington's involvement in the arms deals robbed it of much of its leverage in pressing for an investigation of how the funds were channeled.

Under Swiss Law, banking secrecy technically can be lifted only if the party seeking the information can prove that someone has violated not only its laws but also Swiss. criminal laws.

Bot in recent months, the Swiss authorities have been remarkably conciliatory in dealing with requests for lifting bank secrecy.

ROME — Opus Dei, a Roman Catholic organization, is not a secret society but a legal and legitimate religious association, Interior Minister Oscar Luigi Scalfaro told the Italian Parliament this week, in response to questions from deputies.

Press reports had compared the organization to P-2, a secret Masonic lodge allegedly involved in several scandals, including a plot to overthrow the Italian government.

Opus Dei means "God's work" in Latin. The group was founded in Spain in 1928 with the avowed aim of promoting traditional Christian values. The mainly lay organization, with 73,000 members in 87 countries, has been criticized for its secretive oature. Progressive: Catholics have often questioned its influential role in Spain under General Francisco Franco.

In 1982, Pope John Paul II assigned the organization to a "personal prelature," making it roughly equivalent to a major religious order. "Opus Dei," the Italian interior minister said, "is part of the constitutional structure of the church. It is an ecclesiastical instisubsi

Living further out might not be so bad after all.

That's it. Work's over for the day. Stress has been filed away in the bottom drawer. You can take off your jacket, loosen your tie, and look forward to going home. A 10 kilometre journey, a mere stone's throw.

You get behind the wheel of your 520i and start up. As soon as you hear the deep-throated murmur under the bonnet, the thought strikes you. Why not make a little detour? Just a quick 20 kilometres through the soothing calm of the countryside. Every time your foot touches the accelerator, you can feel the silent power of the 129 horsepower, 6-cylinder engine. Pure pleasure. Even the intrusive clamouring of the country road's cobbled surface is effortlessly swallowed up by the suspension. Before you, a tempting stretch of motorway and the unique, driverminded BMW cockpit. No problems. Just clear information.

And while you're relaxing in your comfortable seat, you're totally aware of the classic 5 Series lines outside. You then turn into the exit road. The detour was once again too short, and you've left that special timeless feeling behind you, back on the road. You promise that next time you're going to call it a day a bit earlier. At the office, that is.

Perhaps you too should take that trip down to your nearest BMW dealer and find out just how much fun you can have with the 520i.

Red Cross Gets Ban Reversed

The Associated Press PRETORIA — The govern-ment reversed itself Wednesday and said the International Red Cross could continue operating in South Africa.

The expulsion was ordered after Pretoria's delegates were removed from a Red Cross conference last month in Geneva. Foreign Minister R.F. Botha said Alexandre Hay, president of the all-Swiss International Committee of the Red Cross, had dissociated himself from the move.

fense lawyers had applied for acquittal of all 22 defendants, saying there was insufficient evidence for cooviction.

The government alleges the defendants conspired to incite violence aimed at overthrowing of the white minnrity government. The 22 men have been in jail for two years and the trial for the 19 remaining defendants is expected to last another year.

Most of the defendants are local or oational leaders of the United Democratic Front, the main mutiracial organization inside the country fighting apartheid.

The state claims the front and its affiliates incited blacks in the reginn to rint and attack members of the government-backed local coua-cil on Sept. 3, 1984. Some black councilors were killed by mobs. After the verdict, the accused raised their fists and joined friends and supporters, including several white women from the Black Sash anti-apartheid group, in singing "Nkosi Sikelele i'Afrika" (God Bless Africa), an anthem used in some black African nations.

CRITICS' CHOICE STUTTGART

Wilson, Norman and Gluck

Robert Wilson first collaborated four years ago in "Great Day in the Morning," a Wilson pro-duction in which the soprano sang Negro spiri-tuals, and carlier this year Wilson staged Euri-pides's "Alcestis" for the American Repertory Theater. These threads will be picked up in a new production by the Stutigart Opera of Gluck's "Alceste" (based on Euripides), with Norman in the title role and Wilson staging ARIS - The Musee d'Or-say, which President Francois Mitterrand will inaugu-rate on Monday, and which will open to the public Dec. 9 after a week of ceremonies, is a museologi-cal triumph for a number of reasons.

Devoted to the second half of the 19th century and the first 14 years of the 20th, it is lodged on the bank of the Seine opposite the Louvre, beneath the great vaulting shell of a former railway station designed by Victor Laloux and completed in 1900. The imposing volume of the glass and steel building has been preserved, as have the refurbished ceiling, graced with monumental posies, and the colossal, ornate clock-face that aptly embodies the industrial age's obsession with punctuality.

Indeed, the space left vacant in the nave is so great that one may at first wonder where they have managed to present a major portion of the 2.300 paintings, 250 pastels, 1,500 sculp-tures and 1,100 art objects that are included in the museum's collections. No need to worry, though, there is more than enough exhibition space 'in the "building-within-a-building" designed by the architect Gae Aulenti. Visitors may even be surprised

The central aisle of the main hall embodies the great split in 19th-century French society between Right and Left and, in aesthetic terms, be tween sober, dreary or ironical Real-ism on the one hand, and elevated, frantie or vapid Idealism (or reverie) on the other.

The issues are apparent as soon as one gets a glimpse of the first rooms. On the left (appropriately enough) we have Daumier — his mordant cartoons, his magnificent paintings, his dazzling caricatures of political opportunists (the unforgettable "Racalled "the legislative belly." On the right, we have Ingres's preposterous "Virgin with the Host," which em-bodies both the artist's impeccable craft and the chief defects inherent in religious art of the period.

The main level continues, on the left, with Theodore Rousseau, Millet, Corot, Courbet, Manet, Fantin-La-tour and the early Impressionists. Be-hind them we have such Realists as Meissonier, Orientalists like Guillaunet, and less easily classified artists such as Adolphe Monticelli. There is a large hall devoted to the monumen-tal works of Courbet that have been

Muti Leads With 'Nabucco'

The Museum of Contemporary Art will open its new building Dec. 10 with a roster of names like Jackson Pol-lock, Willem de Kooning, Jasper Johns, Claes Oldenberg and Frank Stella among the 77 artists represented by 400 works in a major survey of post-World War II art. The $23-million building, sheathed in red sandstone, is the first major design in the United States by the Japanese architect Arata Isozaki. During the inaugural year, more than 230 painters, sculptors, actors, musicians, film and video makers, dancers and poets will be represented in programs in the building in California Plaza, a commercial, residential and cultural complex in the downtown Bunker Hill area. The main exhibition, "Individuals: A Selected History of Contemporary Art, 1945-1986," will be displayed through Jan. 10.

"Nabucco," Verdi's first great success at its premiere at the Teatro alla Scala in 1842, is the opera that Riccardo Muti will conduct to inaugurate his first season as La Scala's music di-rector Dec. 7. The new production will be staged by Roberto De Simone and designed by Mauro Carosi (sets) and Odette Nicoletti (costumes). The title role will be sung by Renato Bru-son, with Ghena Dimitrova as Abigaille and Cleopatra Ciurca, Bruno Beccaria and Paata Burchuladze in other princi-pal parts. Eight other performances are sched-uled through Dec. 30.

Miro Retrospective

A retrospective of the work of Joan Miró, said to be the first since the death of the Catalan artist in 1983, has been organized by the Zurich Kunsthaus and the Düsseldorf Kunsthalle. It includes a hundred paintings, concentrating on the Surrealist period, the dramatic works of the 1930s and his postwar development. There are also drawings, sculpture and pottery from all periods of his career. The exhibition is in Zurich to Feb. 1, 1987, in Düsseldorf from Feb. 14 to April 20, and at the Gug-genheim Museum in New York from May 15 to Aug. 23.

he labyrinthine quality of some of the passages they are required to

Most satisfying is that this tremen-dous selection of works, so diverse in style and intent, is displayed with such shownanship and skill that even the uniformed visitor should have no trouble following the intricate counterpoint of conflicting movements that marked that complex age. Entering the museum by the doors of the former hotel, the visitor passes through some austere iron gates and gets a first glimpse of the central nave from the top of a broad flight of stairs. Aulenti was miffed when some critics declared that her design looked like a comic book version of the Valley of the Kings. The compar-ison may be uncharitable, but it is at least a convenient way of conjuring up a vision of the sloping central aisle, studded with bits of mainly comy statuary (the 19th century's sculpture, with a few exceptions, was hardly on a par with its painting), and leading up to the hall's twin towers, which are intended, in due course, to present a section on architecture and design. The aisle is flanked hy some por-

The aisle is flanked hy some por-tentously complicated walls which are, in fact, the most "Egyptian" part of the central complex. They enclose what might be termed a series of lateral chapels in which works from 1848-70 are displayed. Many critics by anticipation had expressed missions about the mu-expressed misgivings about the mu-scum's declared intention of present-ing, under a single roof, the works of Manet and the Impressionists on the one hand, and those of the academic printers (froum in Frence as "less painters (known in France as "les Pompiers"), the Symbolists and other movements whose art-historical legitimacy is not as well established on the other. Wouldn't this confuse the public? And did this not imply that aesthetic quality was no longer the sole criterion of choice?

The dilemma was real enough. The Orsay museum had been conceived to present an overall view of the 19th century. It had fallen heir to a lot of stuff, some good, some fair, some terrible, that could not just be suppressed because it did not happen to suit present-day taste. How then should these works be presented so as to respect both the criteria of historical accuracy and those of aesthetic quality?

The answer is satisfyingly subtle, thanks to the chief curator, Michel Laclotte, who recently handed the finished product over to his succes-sor, Françoise Cachin, Laclotte's solution consists of breaking up the presentation into 30 sections, ranging in scale from the Babylonian to the theatrical and the intimate, then in hanging the paintings in a way that suggests a different approach to the works themselves. Some of the high-ceilinged halls have Naturalist or Symbolist canvases hanging one above the other, while the Impresbrought over from the Louvre while. not far from there, Whistler's "Mother" has also found a home.

On the right are presented Roman-tics such as Delacroix, Paul Huet, Chasseriau and his disciples Gustave Morean and Puvis de Chavannes, but also an early Degas ("Semiramis Building Babylon") and several aca-demie heavies such as Cabanel and Thomas Couture, represented by his Cecil B. de Millian "Decadence of Rome," clearly modeled on Veronese's "Last Supper" in the Louvre.

Behind this row of rooms, and oo a slightly higher level, are rooms devoted to works by lesser painters (Isa-bey's "Temptation of Saint Anthony" for instance) or to the decorative

The far end of the nave is occupied by sculptures by Carpeaux ("La Danse" among them) and by a section devoted to the Paris Opera building, a climax of Baroque Eclecticism. The display includes a large-scale model of the Opéra district encased in the floor and covered with large slabs of glass over which the visitor can walk.

HE upper level, which can be reached by escalator, includes all the familiar Impressionist works from the Jeu de Paume and from various donations, and in the prolongation of this first conscious mbodiment of an avant-garde, the artists and movements who worked under the Impressionists' influence: Gauguin, van Gogh, Lautrec and a number of the Nabis.

More escalators lead to the intermediate level, to some of the more ornate reception halls of the former railway station. Here we come across further academic items, such as Fernand Cormon's huge "Children of Cain" or Edouard Detaille's "Le rève," but also an effective dramatic work by André Devambez ("La Charge") showing troops dispersing a crowd of demonstrators on a broad boulevard.

The room devoted to Symbolist art includes more works by Puvis de Chavannes and Gustave Moreau, as well as items by Böcklin, Burne-Jones, Henri Martin and Lévy-Dhurmer, and a dazzling and oot at all symbolistic Winslow Homer, "Summer Night," depicting two women waltziog together in the moonlight:

Art Nouveau and Art Déco rooms follow, one of them containing an implausible and now highly prized bookcase hy Rupert Carabin, crawling with bizarre figures and oude women carved in wood.

Other sections are devoted to architecture, the press, photography and temporary "dostier" exhibitions. The museum's vocation is clearly to urge a critical reappraisal of neglected artists of the 19th cectury, but also to give a broader view of the period than heretofore.

BBC's 50 Years of Magic Rays

by Francis X. Clines

ONDON — Fifty years of television have been celebrated in a monthlong feast by the British Broadcasting Corporation, the grand instituuion, at once hoary and ethereal, that some call Auntie and others call the Beeb, and that most, it seems, must call controversial.

No other power on earth can do what the BBC does well for its audiences, whether in presenting the electronic groundlings with the time-resistant pomp and circumstance of royal family life, or in pioneering a no less fascinating TV vigil via optic fiber on a British garden mole happily tunneling a life for himself beneath this sceptered isle; whether in taking the soap-opera plunge at full-Cockney strength in "East Enders" with all the dropped h's and suicidal dilemmas of Dirty Den and Angie at the Queen Victoria pub, or in never losing touch with the classics, such as a new children's version of "David Copperfield".

As an insuittion, the BBC is wondrous. It turns out 6,000 programs a year, from art to schlock, with nature shows and dramaile productions remaining among its strongest sinis. Not all of the American viewer's favorite trans-Atlanuic imports are BBC products. Most notahly, "Brideshead Revisited" and "Upstairs, Downstairs" were made by independent British producers, and for all its identity with American public television, the BBC has a busier resale relationship with the Arts and Entertainment cable network in America. In turn, the BBC happily buys such American warhorses as "Dynasty".

"If you want to know one of my goals for the second 50 years," says Bill Cotton, managing director of BBC Television, "it would be to finally get in bed with a commercial American network for some good co-productions." Why it has not happened yet fascinates him.

The long ago instant of birth for BBC TV seems quaint but prophetic, a gussied-up occasion on Nov, 2, 1936, when a chanteuse named Adele Dixon, seen by that first public of 400 set owners in living Lon Chaney black-and-white, sang out: "A mighty maze of mystic magic rays is all about us in the blue." The moment bad just the sort of dopey wonder that best defines television on any good day. But all the decades of magic can easily be taken for granted when the Beeb is on the national carpet, as it is now, with the politicians complaining about its impenetrable bureaucracy and allegedly leftist bias in the newsroom.

"There is no depression in this house and we do not contemplate the possibility of defeat," says Cotton, presiding through the latest round of criticism of the world's largest television production enterprise. More relevant to him than the talk of Auntic's fairness and inertia is the pending challenge of video technology, the world of cable and cassettes and dish antennas and independent sources of programming. He envisions Britain entering that wider, more entrepreneurial world with the BBC remaining the heart of things because of its edge in buman talent. The tone was high from the beginning, for

The tone was high from the beginning, for a year after the BBC began the world's first regular programming, its schedule incloded live drama by George Bernard Shaw that be personally supervised. It was variegated, too, with oo less a pop performer than Fats Waller singing oo an early program. The highlights show that such artists as Laurence Olivier and Margot Fonteyn quickly parthan 20 million viewers, the first time a TV audience exceeded a radio audience. Highlights range from the first televised Olympic Games in 1948, to the grand Jacob Bronowski science travels, to such landmark TV bumor as "That Was the Week That Was" and "Monty Python's Flying Circus." Aside from Princess Diana, no national institution may get closer scrutiny from the BBC audience than the medium itself. The Fakland war exemplified the carping. Some critics demanded to know why the BBC news was oot overtly patriotic. Tories wanted newscasters to speak of "our" forces or even its payroll of 28,000 was larger than the Falkland expeditionary force. The BBC, while free of the huckster excesses of commercial TV prevalent in the United States, is still yoked to a license fee on TV set owners as a revenue source. It currently is an S87-per-set annual tithing that used to be a deep goldmine when TV ownership was a booming rage. But now it is a largely frozen figure — providing S1.1 billion a year — that limits BBC budget growth and lets the government enjoy heightened power in the decision of wbether to allow a rate increase. The BBC is also constitutionally tied to the government in the appointment of its board of governors.

Using the appointments option, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is attempting to signal a new BBC era with the designation of a new chairman of the board of governors. He is Marmaduke Hussey, the former director of Times Newspapers, who is expected to be more of a hands-oo communications manager and less of a titular policy intooer than some of his predecessors.

Some Thatcherites insist he will wield an executive swagger stick and "get in there and sort it out." This would be oothing less than finally exercising the board's theoretical superiority over the BBC's entrenched hierarchy currently led by Alasdair Milne, the BBC director general. He oversees 26 executives who belp him run a raj that includes two TV and four radio networks, plus regional TV operations, local radio and global broadcasting in most languages.

The BBC remains discreet enough to respond to critical flurries with nervousness. This was clear when the half-century celebration began in distraction as much as retrospection last month. A cake of blazing candles was wheeled out at a press party in the BBC's White City Television Center, a glass-and-metal sprawl of buildings that is as royal a castle as any. The wine and special video samplings of five decades of funny, nostalgie programs — Benny Hill so young and foolish. Elizabeth so young and regal, Joan Collins so young and vampy — had several of the mass pack of TV writers chuckling.

But there remained one young reporter of nasal persistence who insisted on working the present and kept asking about the BBC's bumiliating episode with its latest libel suit. No comment, said the executives, pronouncing the occasion too happy for such asides. On the eve of the party, the BBC leadership had shaken its confident image and demoralized many members of its news staff by surrendering in mid-trial to charges that it had maligned two Conservative members of Parliament by labeling them right-wing extremists.

The suit grew out of one of the offerings on the "Panorama" show, one of the flagship news programs. The BBC settled ingloriously with a sizable yield of cash and on-the-air apologies to the two politicians, who some thought might have had a case for journalism that seemed more melodramatic and sloppy than conspiratorial.

But Brüisb libel fighting is bare-knuckled, and with national elections in the offing, the unexpected retreat has cheered Prime Minister Thatcher and her Conservative Party hierarcby. They quickly followed up hy accusing the BBC of presenting a hiased, anti-American and anti-Thatcher news account of the attack on Libya last April by U.S. bombers that flew from British bases. The BBC responded by accusing the government of attempting pre-election intimidation. (The BBC's self-defense was signed by Hussey, which may bave disappointed the Thatcherites.) The governing party continues to sift literally each phrase of BBC newscasts. Such attempts at Newtonian tasking may network was modernizing and improving journalism standards that, in the views of professional critics, had slipped in comparison with the product of Independent Television, BBC's commercial rival. The Annan Committee found a decade

The Annan Committee found a decade ago that BBC news had been left behind and could learn much from American methods. Rather than uncovering a lefust bias, the Annan Committee found the BBC management "scruppilous to the point of paranoia" about fairness and in greater danger from "institutional malaise". To remedy that, some critics feel decentralization is the care through semi-independent operations run by separate boards and managers.

One mundane measure of the BBC's budget restraints are the soporific bouts of darts and snookers that are watched into these autumnal viewing nights as the principals, made heroie in close-ups, swill pints to ease the alleged tension. They seem a long way from such BBC alumni as Dylan Thomas and George Orwell, who is said to have modeled his Ministry of Truth propaganda mill in "1984" on some of his impressions as a worker in the BBC's External Service radio broadcasts.

This-is the taproot operation that first blanketed the world with the BBC's special tone of understated excellence. To its credit, that remains as the definitive mark of the BBC, even as the huge TV production maw produces works that veer from impudent, biting comedy to the cliches of American television, including the morning smorgasbord of news-cum-celebrity-chitchat. On the latter shows, the earnest weatherman is even more hilarious than in America because his forecasts of change are even more unchanging. Thus does the Beeb ease the English into another gray familiar day, another half-cenhis erstwhile secretary, the poet Rainer Maria Rilke, that to recreate one of his sculptures in words he would have to talk for a year. What he meant is made clear in an international loan show of 100 sculptures and 150 works on paper — "Rodin: Sculpture & Drawings," at the Hayward Gallery to Jan. 25, sponsored by Pearson PLC, and organized and cataloged by the Arts Council's senior exhibition officer, Catherine Lampert.

The exhibition is principally drawn from the Musée Rodin in Paris, which houses the sculptor's gift to the French nation, and at Meudon, his final studio and home, but also has considerable loans from Denmark, England, Finland, Hungary, Switzerland and the United States.

the United States. The show is mounted in roughly chronological sequence, but with variations to demonstrate the development of a style or an idea. Earliest are the drawings he made on a multiplicity of themes. It is often forgotten that his earliest formal training was at a school of drawing and mathematics for artisans, which cansed him to rebuke a critic who had commended the dreamlike quality of his work -- "I am not a dreamer but a mathematician. My sculpture is good because it is geometrical."

cause it is geometrical." This was not being quite fair to himself, however, for even his earliest drawings are replete with imaginative jumps. As Rodin himself insisted, "by following nature, one has everything. When I have a woman's body as a model, the drawings I make of it also give me images of insects, birds, fish. That seemed extraordinary even to me, and I didn't myself know it until I saw it happening unwished for before my eyes."

The absorbed state in which Rodin worked is recorded by his colleague Taxil Doat, when both were ceramic designers at the Sevres porcelain studios. "While he was working he was impervious to everything around him. When the bell rang for lunch I would pass by his studio to let him know it had rung, and go out together. With a distracted air he would very slowly detach his wide-open eyes from the object be was working on as though reluctant to be disturbed, torn from the idea that filled his head and vanished in the presence of others."

Small wonder then that though the Sevres records show that Rodin was there for 1,352; hours, he designed no more than 18 vases, of which the "Vase de Saigon" in the Josefowitz Collection is one of the most beautiful.

While he was modeling delicate porcelains at Sèvres, he was preoccupied in his studio in Rue Saint-Jacques with a massive commission from the minister of fine arts, to make vast bronze portals for a new museum of decorative arts, which should rival Ghiberti's great doors for the Baptistry in Florence. Rodin's idea was to take as his theme Virgil and Dante at the gates of Hell, and the project, which remained unfinished in his studio at his death in 1917, for a museum that was never built, came to be known as din's idea, consisting of more than 200 figures of the dammed, their attendants and witnesses. It was Anatole France who observed that there were no monsters in Rodin's Hell — "The demons through whom these men and women suffer are their own passions, their loves and hatreds; they are their own flesh, their own thoughts."

The drawings, magnetics and examples of ... the principal figures and groups of Rodin's middle period form the great cores of the show — the Thinker, the Falling Man, Lust, Avarice, Paolo and Francesca (here called "Fugitive Love"), Meditation, Danaid, Despair — which metamorphose by some Ovidian scalptures to a group of portraits, notably of Hugo and Balzac, and into scalptures of "The Muses," created in association with the "Momment to Victor Hugo."

Significant among the Muse sculptures is , a series devoted to "Iris, Messenger of the Gods," some of a flying, dancing or reclining nude, some of a serene but primitive head, : and all the figures relating to Rodin's passionate interest in the dance — or rather the dancers Loie Fuller and Isadora Duncan, and the Japanese dancer Hanako, of whom he made more than 50. busts, heads, and masks, as well as many drawings.

URICH --- One of modem photography's long forgotten talents - and one of its most remarkable romances - is commemorated in an exhibition of the Swiss photographer Weiner Bischof at Kunsthaus here through Jan.

Bischof died on May 16, 1954, when his vehicle ran off a cliff in the Peruvian Andes, in the course of an assignment that was to have wtaken him the length of South America. He was only 38, but in less than one decade, working on lour continents as a partner in the cooperative agency Magnum, he had tisen to the top in the twin worlds of photo-journalism and photography as art. In Zurich, his wife, Roselling, gave birth nine days later to their second son, Daniel. Almost simultaneously came word that Robert Capa of Magnum had died on May 24 in Indochina, killed by a land mine while covering his fifth war. Capa was not only the president and principal founder of the agen-cy, but a virtual brother to Bischof. Rosellina Bischof dedicated herself to furthering her husband's work and that of the people her believed in. She saw to the publicaion of eight posthumous books. She opened a Magnum office in Zurich. In 1963 she married the Swiss photographer René Burri, who had been a protege of Bischof's. In 1981 she became a principal founder of the Stiftung für die Photographie Schweiz (Swiss Foundation for Photography) and developed its exhibition program. In 1946, en route to Greece on one of his first postwar missions, Bischof stopped for the night at a hostel in Milan. Rosellina, a blackhaired Swiss beauty whose slightly Oriental look betrayed the Mongo-lian strain in her Hungarian ancestry, was staying there on her way to Rimini, where she worked in a Swiss-sponsored school for war orphans. Both were on the rebound from other romances; it seems to have been love at first sight.

just before her death, she was quite in awe of Werner. In Zorich he already had a reputation as an ontstanding photographer and graphic artist. He had graduated at 20 from the Kunstgewerbeschule, the star pupil of Hans Finsler, a master of technique and of the prevailing photo-aesthetic of the time. Following military service and a year with the Swiss art magazine Graphis, Bischof went to Paris, hoping to become a painter, but returned to Zurich in 1939, - ... From his first encounters with refugees, with hungry prisoners of war and their well-fed captors, his work took on a human dimension that it never lost. In 1947 and 1948 Bischof accompanied Swiss relief missions into Eastern Europe. He was deeply affected by what he saw. In December 1947, he wrote from Budapest; "It is Christmas Eve. For example, the five-page truce agreement makes no mention of a previous rebel demand that the mil. The itary dismantle "notorious" units of the paramilitary Civilian Home Defense Force. The army has relied on those units, which are basically armed civilian militias, to belater troop strength in key villages. But the largely intrained troops have also been widely cited for abusing human rights.

The truce document says that during the period of a cease-fire, the army shall "disarm and punish abusive members and units in the field, including abusive CHDF." In return, according to the truce docu-ment, the Communists agree to dis-arm and punish their abusive members and units.

In Public-Private Job, India Is Cleaning Ganges

By NILOVA ROY

Special to the Heraid Tribune ENARES, India -- In one of the world's largest environ-B ENARES, India — In one of the world's largest environ-mental projects, private companies and public agencies are trying to clean up the Ganges River. About 300 million people, or 37 percent of India's population, live along the river, but none have adequate sewage treatment. The "Ganga," as it is called here, "especially is the river of India," the country's first prime minister, Jawaharlal Nehru, wrote in his autobiography. "Beloved of her people, she has been a symbol of India's age-long culture and civilization, ever-chang-ing, ever-flowing, and yet ever the same Ganga." Yet Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, Nehru's grandson, noted during a June ceremony to in-

The plan calls for blocking is no match for the the flow of pollutants into the 1,565-mile (2,525-kilometer) Ganges project." river, which stretches from the Himalayas to the Bay of Bengal. The five-year project, launched in October 1985, will employ about 90,000 and will cost the government an estimated 2.93 billion rupees ($222.6 million). There are no figures available on total private costs.

"By 1990, 80 percent of the pollutants now present in the river will be eliminated," said Nilay Chaudhuri, one of the planners and former chairman of India's Central Board for Prevention and Control of Water Pollution. "National efforts to clean the Thames or the Rhine are no match for the Ganges project in scope.'

The plan calls for diverting sewage flowing into the river to other locations for treatment. The treated sewage will be converted into an energy source and sold, generating revenue for the governmen

BUT CARRYING OUT the plan will not be simple, given its scope. The Ganges basin covers 341,450 square miles (900,000 square kilometers) and provides water to eight provinces in India's prime agricultural belt. About 47 percent of the country's irrigated land lies in this basin, where wheat, rice and sugar cane are main crops. "The fact that very few of the cities along the river have even the semblance of a sewage-disposal system make it even more daunting," Mr. Chaudhuri said. According to official records, at least 237,000 gallons (900 million liters) of municipal sewage are dumped daily into the Ganges, accounting for 75 percent of the pollution in the river.

The project initially will target the 100 river cities and towns with populations of 50,000 or more. Twenty-seven of those have, populations exceeding 100,000. Calcutta, the largest, has more than 9 million inhabitants, and Benares and Kanpur in Uttar Pradesh state each have more than 1 million.

"Instead of the municipal waste finding its way directly into the river, as it does now," said Indra Mohan Sahai, chairman of the water authority in Uttar Pradesh, "we are intercepting it and taking it out of towns." The French company Degremont SA is negotiating with India on behalf of the French government to build a treatment plant at Benares and for a technology transfer on "energy-resource recovery."

Through this process, the treatment plant, to be built on the. Site of an existing sewage dump, will become an energy source. First, Mr. Chaudhuri said, "Raw sewage is led to a settling process separating solids from liquid. Solid wastes are fed into a digester to produce methane gas, which is then fed to a gas See GANGES, Page 15

Investment Hangs Fire in Grenada

By Mark Kurlansky Special to the Heraid Tribune

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada - "We in Grenada do not want anyone to give us a handout. We want a hand up," Prime Minister Herbert Blaize frequently says.

Many Grenadans thought that hand up would be the U.S. aid package that has brought in $82 million since the October 1983 invasion and the Caribbean Basin Initiative.

But three years after U.S. troops landed here, after four years of virtual boycott by the Reagan administration, prosperity and large-scale invest-ment bave yet to reach Grenada, an island with lovely tropical beaches.

The Caribbean Basin Initiative, cornerstone of Reagan administration policy in the region, was to spur investment in 21 member countries by offering duty-free entry for most goods to the United States.

But the three-year-old program has had few takers among investors, and Cariobean exports to the United States have been steadily declining in dollar terms. According to the U.S. Commerce Department, exports from CBI countries to the United States fell 22 percent last year and are continuing to fall at about that rate this year.

Boesky Scandal Fails to Discourage Merger Mania

Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON - Despite suggestions that the Ivan F. Boesky insider-trading case and congressional hearings into merger mania might cool the ardor of Wall Street's deal makers, takeover fever continues unabated.

This week has seen four more huge offers - three in excess of $1 billion - by suitors and raiders eager to take advantage of the cur-rent covironment before U.S. tax laws change Jan. 1. "It hasn't cooled off," said T.

Boone Pickens, one of the bestknown raiders who nevertheless is sitting out the market. "It's going to continue as long as you have World debt crisis crupted, OPEC undervalued assets in the marketmembers' share has been cut to 1.3 place. Boesky is a side show."

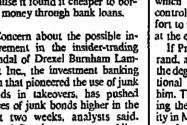

Those two events rekindled con- - or repurchase of his stock in the gressional outrage about takeovers, company at a premium, giving him with many on Capitol Hill con- a big, quick profit. Many congres-tending that buyouts have gotten sional critics want to ban such transactions, out of hand and calling for legislation to protect companies from hostile bids.

Analysts said the four offers seem to indicate that some highly bostile bids are still going on. For ing "greenmail" from Borg-Warner times issued to raise capital.

Still, there was some indication that problems affecting one segment of the takeover boom are having some effect: People's and Swarseem to indicate that some highly ovski changed the terms of their criticized practices associated with offer for Zale to eliminate controversial junk bonds from the financinstance, there was immediate ing package. Junk bonds are risky speculation that Mr. Jacobs is seek- but high-yielding securities some-

People's said it made the switch because it found it cheaper to borrow money through bank loans.

Concern about the possible involvement in the insider-trading scandal of Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., the investment banking firm that pioneered the use of junk bonds in takeovers, has pushed prices of junk bonds higher in the past two weeks, analysts said. Drexel Burnham was assembling the financing package for People's and Swarovski.

The office said the cumulative current-account surplus for the first 10 months of this year was 59.4 hillion DM, compared with 26.1

French Cabinet Votes to Lift

Price Controls

New York Times Service PARIS - France's conservative government has agreed to lift most remaining price controls by the end of the year. including those on bread and restaurants, and to overhaul corporate competition laws.

But it decided Wednesday to retain controls on books, tohacco and pharmaceutical prod-ucts, gas and electricity, taxis, mass transit and oewsprint, and also outlawed "loss leaders," retail items sold below cost in an attempt to lure cusinmers,

The cabinet of Prime Miniser Jacques Chirac abolished the decree of June 30, 1945, which established government control over all prices in an effort to stop black marketeering at the cod of the war.

If President François Mitterrand, a Socialist, does oot sign the degree, the conservative National Assembly may overrule him. The Socialists, before losing their parliamentary majority in March, had lifted cootrols oo about 90 percent of French industrial products.

last vear's. BASF said world group pretax profit slipped to 2.15 billion Deutsche marks (about $1.08 billion) in the first nine months of 1986 from 2.46 billion DM a year earlier. Revenue was down 5.7 percent, to 30.86 billion DM from 32.72 billion DM

BASF's Profit Fell 12.6%

The chairman of the managing board, Hans Albers, said 1986 profit and sales would fall short of last year's for two reasons.

These were the fall of the dollar, which hurt revenue from exports to uch regions as Latin America and Southeast Asia, and of oil prices, which caused BASF to make provision for depreciation of raw materials and oil-derived products.

Mr. Albers said world group turnover for full-year 1986 was expected to drop to 40.5 billion DM from 44.38 billion last year. He ave no specific earnings forecast.

But he said that a better third quarter, and a fourth quarter that is expected to be good, bode well for the first half of 1987.

COMPANY NOTES

Bank of British Columbia, in a widely expected move, said it had agreed to be taken over by Hong-kong Bank of Canada, a unit of Hongkong & Shanghai Banking Corp. The bank, Canada's seventh largest domestic bank, said Hongkong Bank would pay about 63.5 million Canadian dollars ($45.7 million) for most of its estimated 2.88 billion dollars of assets.

Commerzbank AG said partial operating earnings rose almost 9 percent in the first 10 months of 1986. Commerzbank's pretax, partial operating earnings rose to 659 million Deutsche marks ($327.8 million), up from 607.3 million DM a year earlier. Control Data Corp. has backed out of an agreement

Dresdner Bank AG's earnings in the first 10 months of 1986 surpassed year-earlier levels. Wolfgang Röller. the bank's managing board chairman, said the parent bank's partial operating earnings in the first 10 months of 1986 totaled 757.5 million Deutsche marks ($379.8 million), up 10 percent from 685.8 million DM. LTV Corp., the second-largest U.S. steel company, has reported a $2.08-hillion riet loss in its third quarter. The net loss was the company's largest in a single three-month period, exceeding the previous $610.4million dollar record in the second quarter. Motorola Inc. has signed a preliminary agreement with Toshiba Corp. that covers exchange of semiconductor products and technologies and formation of a joint venture to make computer chips in Japan.

prices of Central London's residential pro- solid and with the importance perty have climbed beyond what many of the City of London as a national and international buyers and investors believe are reasonable. There are clear signs that the buoyant sellers' market is shifting to a buyers' market.

After a 25% price rise in 1983 was followed by 35% in both '84 and '85 and a further 20% this year, a point of resistance has been reached. Now there is a surplus of first-class houses and apartments for sale. Native buyers seek reductions. Foreign huyers, who used to account for 50% of the Belgravia, Knightsbridge, Mayfair and How deceptive!

In fact, rare luxury lies within. The law of planning and conservation keep most exteriors immune from change, so architects and designers invest their talents on interiors. Palace is literally the word for a major re-furb north of Kensington Gardens; Palace Court, actually. Richard Collins, of Fremantle Properties, found this seven-storey Edwardian mansion block after a two-year search. It cost him around £3.5 million, and he and his team of craftsmen spent a year restoring it to produce 25 luxury flats within the large U-shaped building. Where possible, original feat-

The movement of the younger professional purchaser to areas such as Docklands, Fulham and Battersea will continue and, whilst running below the levels of the past two years, London prices will continue to move apart from the rest of the country."

Anthony Lassman, of the agency of the same name, also differentiates between truly prime Mayfair, Belgravia, Knightsbridge, Chelsea, Holland Park and St John's Wood on one hand and parvenu locations such as Bayswater on the other. The latter, together with the area north of Oxford Street, have been byped up in the past year to a level that cannot be sustained. Vendors there are now having to price down.

Crown Court, opposite the Mosque in Regents Park, is also in this category and its dering the City of London. It apartments are not realising the anticipated prices. In contrast, top-of-the-roost property just across the park in Prince Albert Road comfortably ferches the asking price. Indeed, Lassmans sold two splendidly refurbished Nash period houses there to the same buyer at £1,500,000 and £950,000, the former including an indoor pool.

proportioned rooms. The building has been completely converted and restored to more than its former glory with two maisonettes and three two-bed flats in addition to the penthouse. Lord Francis Russell, eponymous head of his own agency, focuses his attention on mansion blocks built at the turn of the century. They are not usually regarded as artistic masterpieces, he points out, but these imposing buildings often conceal flats and maisonettes with qualities which can't be found elsewbere. In particular, there is not the restricting 16-20ft frontages so common to most London house conversions.

As typical he quotes Flat 7, t 51 Drayton Gardens, South Kensington. The apartment is on the second floor of a mansion block purpose-built for well to do bachelors in 1896. It has a 22ft x 14ft drawing room and a similar sized dining room adjoining so that either formal dinner parties or large cocktail parties can be beld. Both rooms face west with large French windows to wrough iron balconies.

The four bedrooms are set at the back of the building, three of them with their own bathroom. The master bath-bay extended to make better with its own American-style shower cubicle.

The flat is being offered for sale with both carpets and curtains at £335.000. by W.A. Ellis, Jackson Stops & Staff and Francis Russell.

Aimed specifically at an international clientele is the imaginative restoration of three Victorian mansions at Lancaster Gate, Bayswater, to create 23 apartments (from £95,000 for a one-bedder to £550,000 for a five-bedder) plus a spectacular penthouse. This latter, offered at £850.000 from joint agents Sturgis and Stuart Wilson, spans all three buildings, 3,300 sq ft with private lift, roof terrace, staff flat - all exquisitely furnished.

Ski Season to Start With One Battle Renewed, One Decided

By Mike Clark The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Marc Girardelli of Luxenbourg and Pirmin Zurbriggen of Switzerland have spent the last three years waging a private battle for supremacy in the world of Alpine ski racing. They may get a lot of company this year.

There also will be a lot of skiers capable of winning the women's World Cup overall title, but picking a champion is easy. She will be from witzerland Zurbriggen won the men's overall title in 1984 and Girardelli, the transplanted Austrian, captured the prestigious trophy the last two seasons. He won last year almost despite himself, with only one victory, but edged Zurbriggen by 294 point to 284.

"Marc had a bad year and Zurbriggen was burt part of the year," said the U.S. ski team's Alpine director, Harald Schoenhaar. "With a healthy Zurbriggen, Marc would not have won the World Cup. It was an off year on the men's side, from the overall view." The men's tour, which began in August with two downhills at Las Lenas, Argentina, was to resume Saturday at Sestriere, Italy. The women's tour was to open Saturday at Park City, Utah, the first time -either circuit has begun a season in North America. Odds are that Girardelli and Zurbriggen will again occupy the top two places in the standings come spring 1987, but several young racers should have a lot to say in the outcome. "Wasmaier will be there, too," Schoenhaar said of West Germany's Markus Wasmaier, who was third last season while steadily improving in all four disciplines.

Slalom champion Rok Petrovic of Yugoslavia, giant slalom specialist Hubert Strolz of Austria and blooming gate racer Günther Mader of Austria each return from solid seasons and, by improving in the other disciplines, should play major oles in the title chase. And then there are the veterans who won eight races while pumping some much-needed life into the 1986 season: Sweden's incomparable Ingemar enmark, downhillers Leonhard Stock and Anton Steiner of Austria and slalom aces Paul Frommelt of Liechtenstein and Bojan Krizaj of Yugoslavia. Stock and Steiner are 28, the others are 30. The way they skied last year, that's a tribute to the old men," Schoenhaar said, "but it doesn't speak well for the younger racers. It tells you that if you are willing to work, you can stay past 30. We see it in these guys. They're still winning races." Grardelli, who won 11 races in dominating the 1985 care generated throughout 1986 if 17 care 1985 season, struggled throughout 1986 — if 17 top-five finishes can be considered struggling. He came to the World Cup as a slalom specialist but by last year had embraced the other three discipli downhill, super-giant slalom and giant slalom - in an effort to become an all-around skier.

"I spread myself too thin, and because of the publicity things from my first World Cup, I didn't have enough time to train in all four disciplines," Girardelli said. "I skied well until January, but by the end I was just hanging on."

He learned one thing during that long season: how to say no. "I learned that I would have to draw the line on all the outside things so I could have chough time to train."

Zurbriggen likewise dropped a heavy off-mountain burden when he completed his mandatory active service with the Swiss army. He had to take leave last year just 10 compete in the early races. Then a nasty spill in a downhill race at Val d'Isere, rance, cost him a month of competition.

Wasmaier, like Girardelli, dabbled in the four disciplines, but with no loss of results in his specialty, the super-giant slalom. He was in the inp five in every super-giant station. He was in the inp five in every super-giant last season, winning twick, and the increasing use of downhill trails with more turns plays to his strength as be seeks improvement in the sport's glamor event.

Combined scoring — factoring a downhill result with a gate race for a "combined" third result — will play less of a role this season. Only two are duled, which means that the even ual overall champion will have to win the title on the mountains, not in the scoring shed.

The combined was added by the International Ski Federation as a way to award skiers willing to compete, but not always able to score points, in all disciplines. With Girardelli, Zurbriggen and Wasmaier leading the way, more skiers are scoring in all disciplines, thus decreasing the need for combined points.

The downhill constitutes almost a tour unto itself. Peter Wirnsberger of Austria dominated

B2) Wirnsberger will have a battle defending against Peter Müller of Switzerland, a three-time champion who barely missed a fourth title last season despite breaking his wrist in a spill. Swiss women have won the overall title five times in six years, missing only in 1983, when Tamara McKinney of Lexington, Kentucky, became the only American woman to win the championship. History and talent indicate another Swiss triumph this year.

History also dictates that Maria Walliser won't repeat as the champion. No woman has managed consecutive titles since Austria's fabled Annemarie Moser-Proell completed a five-year sweep in 1975.

But Walliser does have talent on her side, and it will take a mighty effort by one of her teammates to beat ber. She won the downhill title a year ago and was among the best on the tour in the supergiant and giant slalom.

Yet there are challengers, most of them wearing Swiss uniforms. The top five returning scorers from last year are from Switzerland, including 1985 winner Michela Figini and two-time titlist Erika Hess.

The leading candidates to end the Swiss reign are Yugoslavian sensation Mateja Svet, who turned 18 this summer, and West Germany's Marina Kiehl

Svet was the first Yugoslavian woman in win a with four victories, the most in one season since race — she won two last season — and finished seventh overall in her first full year on the tour. Perhaps the greatest raw talen) on the circuit, she should only get better with experience.

> Kiehl, like Wasmaier on the men's side, is a super-gian) and grand slalom specialist. The decrease in combined points won't hurt her nearly as much as it will the Swiss.

American prospects after a terrible 1986 are guarded. The usually strong women's team fell apart, costing its coach, Brad Gbent, his job. And the men's learn hasn't accomplished much since twin stars Phil and Steve Mahre retired in 1984.

But Debbie Armstrong of Seattle, the 1984 Olympic giant slalom gold medalist, is coming back from knee surgery. Last year's team missed her driving personality as much as her skiing.

Also returning from injury is Diane Roffe of Williamson, New York, winner of the giant slalom in the 1985 World Championships. She didn't score a point last year.

The men's team centers on its downhillers, notably 1984 Olympic champion Bill Johnson of Ma-libu, California. He skied so badly in 1985 that he fell out of the first seedings, but last year's four top-10 finishes indicated that he might be on the vay back.

Doug Lewis of Salisbury, Vermont, is the other accomplished downhiller --- be won a bronze medal in the 1985 World Championships - while Mike Brown of Vail, Colorado, is the best of the rest

ART BUCHWALD Explaining Thanksgiving

(Years ago a young reporter living in Paris told his French mistress he could not see her that Thursday as he was going to have a Thanksgiving dinner with American friends. The mistress pouted and said, "What is Thanksgiving dinner?" And this is what the young man told her.)

ONE of our most important words but of action (un vieux Fan-holidays is Thanksgiving Day. fan la Tulipe), offers his hand and known in France as le Jour de Merci Donnani

Le Jour de Merci Donnant was first started hy a group of Pilgrims (Pélerins) who fled from l'Angleterre before the McCarran Act to found a colony in the New World

(le Nouveau Monde) where they could shoot Indians (les Peaux-Rouges) and eat turkey (dinde) 10 their hearts' content.

They landed at a place called Plymouth (now a famous voiture Américaine) in a wooden sailing ship called the Mayflower, or Fleur de Mai, in 1620. But while the Pélerins were killing the dindes the Peaux-Rouges were killing the Pélerins and there were several hard winters ahead for both of them. The only way the Peaux-Rouges helped the Pélerins was when they taught them to grow corn (mais). The reason they did this was that they liked corn with their Pèlerins.

In 1623, after another harsh year. the Pélerins' crops were so good that they decided to have a celebration and give thanks because more mais was raised by the Pèlerins than Pèlerins were killed hy Peaux-Rouges.

Every year on le Jour de Merci Donnant, parents tell their children an amusing story about the first celebration.

It concerns a hrave capitaine named Miles Standish (known in France as Kilométres Deboutish) and a shy young lieutenant named Jean Alden. Both of them were in love with a flower of Plymouth called Priscilla Mullens (no translation). The vieux capitaine said to the jeune lieutenant:

"Go to the damsel Priscilla (Alle: très vite chez Priscilla), the loveliest maiden of Plymouth (la plus jelie demoiselle de Phymouth). Say that a blunt old captain, a man not of his heart, the hand and heart of a soldier. Not in these words, you know, but this, in short, is my meaning. "] am a maker of war (Je suis un fabricant de la guerre) and not a maker of phrases. You, bred as a scholar (Vous, qui êtes pain comme un ciudiant), can say il in elegant language, such as you read in your books of the pleadings and wooings of lovers, such as you think best adapted to win the heart of the

Although Jean was fit to be tied (convenable à être emballé), friendship prevailed over love and he went to his duty. But instead of using elegant language, he blurted out his mission. Priscilla was muted with amazement and sorrow (rendue muette par l'éconnement et la

At length she exclaimed, intersupting the ominous silence: "If the great captain of Plymouth is so very eager to wed me, why does he not come himself and take the trouhle to woo me?" (Ou est-il, le vieux Kilomètres? Pourquoi ne vient-il pas auprès de moi pour tenter sa chance?)

Jean said that Kilomètres Debouish was very busy and didn't have time for those things. He staggered on, telling her what a wonderful husband Kilomètres would make. Finally Priscilla arched her eyehrows and said in a tremulous voice: "Why don't you speak for yourself, Jean?" (Chacun à son 20WI.) П

And so, on the fourth Thursday in November, American families sit down at a large table hrimming with tasty dishes, and for the only time during the year eat better than the French do.

No one can deny that le Jour de Merci Donnant is a grande fête and no matter how well fed American families are, they never forget to give thanks to Kilometres Deboutish, who made this great day possi-

THERE'S a scene in the new movie "Sid & Nancy" when the actress Chloe Webb crosses the line between art and life. She's playing the junkie girlfriend of Sid Vicious, the English hellion who rose to notoriety as the bass player of the Sex Pistols. Shivering and strung out, Nancy steps into a phone booth hoping to wheedle some money out of her mother in America. "Mom! Guess what?" she says. "We got married! Me and Sid. You remember, Sid Vicious, from the Sex Pistols." She wants $200 in cash instead of a wedding present, hut Mom says no, and Nancy explodes, screaming obscenities into the receiver and then turning on the phone booth itself smashing her hand through the glass.

The special effects crew had replaced some of the 14 panes in the booth with hreakaway sugar glass, hut Webb in the extremity of the moment put her hand through the real thing. "It was quarter-inch glass; my hand went right through, and it didn't feel any different. I broke real glass and I had no feeling of difference. I can't explain what it's like to be in that state. You see the rushes and you don't remember doing it. It's pure energy. If you're in that state, you won't get hurt."

She didn't. "Chloe can be a frighteningly animated acuress," said the producer Eric Fellner. "When she goes for it, she goes for it in a big way." "You think," said the director Alex Cox, "that it's all just acting and pretending. There aren't real bullets in the gun, real drugs in the syringe, real venom in the mind. But the reality is that it does affect you. Chloe and Gary [Oldman, who plays Sid] were both completely dedicated to their parts,"

"Sid & Nancy" is a dark love story based on the "Romeo and Juliet of punk rock." Nancy Spungen came from a Main Line Philadelphia family, tried to commit sui-cide at 12, left home and got addicted to heroin. She took up with Sid Vicious, born John Simon Ritchie, a product of London's East End shums who would embody, in the words of a character in the movie, "the dementia of a nihilistic generation."

They fought, shot dope, made love, tempted fate. Spungen was found stabbed to death in the Chelsea Hotel in New York in October 1978. She was 20. Vicious was charged with her murder. Four months later he was dead too, at 21, of a heroin overdose.

In scenes drawn from real life and from the imagination, Nancy emerges as querulous, needy, tempestnous, scatterbrained and self-destructively loyal. Sid is splenet-ic, hell-bent and, by the end, a zombie. Yet the characters are allowed moments of unsettling beauty and tenderness. Sid gently tears Nancy's fish-net tights to kiss her feet. "This film has nothing to do with drugs, rock 'n' roll or being a public ani-mal," said Cox, whose last movie, "Repo Man," was a critical hit. "It's all about. being in love - love which is so contradictory, which doesn't make sense. In the conventional portrayal of love, the problems all come from the outside. Anybody who has ever been in love knows that the problems are internal. Why am I so dependent on someone else?"

Webb's exploration of that dependency began with an investigation of its context, the sordid punk life of her character in London and New York. Spungen worked occasionally as a dominatrix; Webb visited bondage clubs. She listened to tapes of Spungen's voice, and watched films of her appearances on TV shows.

I talked with one gir) who used to work. with Nancy who said they used to call her 'Panda Eyes.' There was a clue in that. Nancy is like Yoko Ono in London --people think she's responsible for the Sex Pistols' hreakup. She had no self-confi-dence. I think she was really smart - she was supposed to have a high IQ. She was really perceptive. She had that hair-trigger defensiveness combined with that sense of being completely out on a limb with someone

Webh keeps an apartment in New York, but home is Pasadena, California, where she lives with her husband Tom Gelder, a lawyer. Speaking of her part in "Sid & Nancy," Webb said, "I knew it would be very difficult. I thought it was a man's part - all that sweating and screaming and your arm, you're still sitting in the Chelsea sweating - a Glenda Jackson part. I like : Hotel playing someone who really wants to Glenda Jackson and Gena Rowlands, die.'

those roles where they really take a chance and do high dives. I knew Nancy was a high dive."

Webb has a fluid, emotional manner and a penchant for daring enterprise. She has kayaked and sky-dived, run in marathons and climbed Mount Whitney. To stay in the running for teen-age parts, she tries not to publicize her age (well under 30). "I just finished shooting another movie in Rome, The Belly of an Architect' by Peter Greenaway. I play a rich woman. I wear Chanel suits. Making 'Sid & Nancy,' I got used to being able to sit anywhere — on the ground if I wanted. It didn't matter if I burned cigarette holes in my clothes. I sat on the ground in a Chanel suit and they went crazy.

She was named after the nymph in Rav-el's ballet "Daphnis et Chloé," and raised in New York. As a teen-ager in Pough-keepsie in the mid-1970s, she knew nothing of punk rock. At 16 Webh was accepted at the Boston Conservatory of Music and Drama. Graduating four years later, she passed up the frustrations of theater in New York and drove west in an old Chevy. She stopped at the Dash On Dash Off Theater in Terre Haute, Indiana, the start of several years in repertory companies, in Chicago, Seattle, Dallas and Missoula, Montana, Despite her years in the conservatory, it was in the Midwest, teaching theater workshops for retarded adults, that Webb really learned about acting. "I learned about being absolutely in the moment. Your first impression of these severely retarded people is that here is somebody who is five feet tall, overweight, 35 years old with a deformed face, and who slobbers and forgets to go to the bathroom. But then you forget what they're like. You see this other thing — the life — a person who isn't hiding anything. It was a concept that had been presented in four years of drama school. I had heard it, but I had never seen it."

Eventually she returned to New York and landed her a role in "Forbidden Broadway," a parody revue of Broadway hits. " The piece featured actor Miguel Sandoval, who had been in Cox's "Repo Man." He introduced Webb to the director

"Sid & Nancy" was shot chronologically. The life on the screen seeped into the mood of the set. Sid Vicious's mother. a visitor on the set, reacted to Webb as if she, not Nancy Spungen, were to blame for herson's destruction, according to Cox. "It was very depressing," Webb said. "Even though the tracks are painted on

Yestushenko Urges Salt in Stalin Wounds

Yevgeny Yevinsbenko says the I orgeny i crease to say the Soviet Union is experiencing what he calls a literary pro Remaismor. The poet, in Helsinki to give read-ings and to launch the Finnis. translation of his new book "Fuku," denied that the Kremin had told Soviet authors to be more outspoken, a notion model in the West "Writers of my generation have been calling for a long time for faulty attitudes to ha scrapped," he said. "For crammer we have been told that where the we have been tott that what me days of Stalin are concerned it is better not to rub salt into still open. wounds. But in our opinion, mb. bing sugar into those wounds would be even more dangerous."

J. William Fulbright, in London to celebrate the 40th anniversary of the scholarship program that bears his name, described his branchid, as "a small program" but "an inportant symbol of our determinis tion to find understanding rather, than mutual destruction." The former Democratic senator for Arkan, sas, who is 81, was given a standing, ovation at the Guildhall by forme ovation at the Guidnall by former and present Fubright scholars and others marking the anniversary. President Ronald Reagan and Prime Minister Margaret Thateler. sent messages landing the program, which now involves more than 120 countries. The guest speaker, the British-born journalist Alistan Cooke, noted that Fulbright had been in the Senate only eight months when be came up with his. plan to fund the program by selling surplus U.S. war goods.
